MIAMI BEACH, FLA.----Five members of the Young Voters for the President Committee and Senator Bill Brock today will present young people's views on a wide range of issues to the GOP Platform Committee.

In introducing the Young Voters, Senator Brock, chairman Congressional Advisory Committee, Young Voters for the President said, " There is a common theme underlying their plea. It is the expression of frustration with a society and government that is unresponsive to individuals."

The Young Voters, representing some 125,000 now working for the Presidents re-election, will discuss women's rights, vocational education, foreign policy, defense and minority rights.

Women's rights will be discussed by Casey Eke, 22 of Lawrence, Kans. The President of the Inter-collegiate Association of Women Students, she is now assistant to the Dean of Students of the University of Kansas.

Harry (Mac) McNaught, 18, of Logansport, Indiana, will talk about Foreign Policy. He is president of his high school student body and chairman of the Indiana Young Voters for the President.

Mark Tulis, 22, Manhasset Hills, N.Y. will discuss defense and the Middle East. A Brandeis University graduate, he is now attending Boston University Law School.

JoAnn Cullen, 19, of Bristol, Pa. will converse on the issue of Vocational education. She is Vice-President of Distributive Education Clubs of America, totaling a 130,000 member organization.

As a member of the National Advisory Council of Vocational Education, she is President Nixon's youngest female appointee.

Mel Simms, 27, of Fullerton California, will discuss minority rights. He is a former student senator at California State in Los Angeles and is now teaching at California State in Fullerton.
