

Mr. Walkers Opinion.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:

Hon. J. M. Glass of Pasedana, Calif., gave two masterly addresses last Sunday.

Several were heard to say that he ought to have had a thousand listeners in place of the faithful few who were present. Mr. Glass is an orator of National distinction, a Kentuckyan by birth, and of Irish extraction. He holds his audience spell bound.

It is wonderful how the wave of prohibition is sweeping over the country.

The greatest newspaper of our land, such as the Saturday Evening Post, are printing special articles along that line.

The Oregon Journal of last Sunday had a splendid article.

We old time prohibitionists seem now to have but little to do save to sit on the fence and watch the procession sweep by.

Public sentiment is advancing beyond our "firing line" of many years; and the church people are many of them seemingly the "laggards".

We old fighters with our silvering heads and faltering footsteps, find it rather difficult to keep up with the rear column of the prohibition hosts marching on to certain victory, but will "get there".

Hurry up laggards or you will be left clear out of sight.

There is many a minister that can but smile if a lover of beer cusses him to his face but feels sad when the Aarons and Hurs are not by his side. Get there, Brothers?

C. H. WALKER,
