

Oliver Takes Over Today In Football

By SI SIDESINGER

With Tex Oliver expected back in the Duck grid camp today to again assume charge, the varsity football squad continued to roll on into spring practice. Oliver has spent all this week in Portland attending the Pacific Coast football conference. Line Coach Vaughn Corley has assumed charge of the pigskin squad during the head mentor's absence and has kept the husky backs and linemen working hard.

The first actual contact began last night between linemen and the swivel-hipped backs on a few running plays. Tackling was not allowed, the runners being blocked down. This served the purpose of accuracy in blocking, an all-important maneuver, and lessened the possibilities of spring practice casualties.

Roblin Improves

The squad was divided into three teams for signal drill and dummy practice. Koch, Newquist and Roblin, as expected, looked very effective in their roles as potential first stringers. Roblin has had only one turn-out under his belt but looked to be an even more improved ball-player than last fall.

Big Ed Moshofsky, Dick Ashcom, Ray Segale, and Val Culwell have shown plenty to indicate that the Oregon forward wall will be anything but weak. Vic Atiyeh, a speedy 211-pound freshman guard, is not far behind the veterans in battling for a starting position in the annual spring inter-squad game.

Corley also stressed wind sprints as a conditioning factor and a test for speed among the bulky linemen and shifty ball-carriers.
